The LG Electronics BP330 was easy to set up. It responds slowly to the remote control and to network setup, so the device should be turned on for a minute or two before connecting to Netflix or Hulu. The machine worked well for about 6 months. After this period, it started randomly turning off. The problem was small and infrequent at first.

The LG BP330 Blu-ray player was literally the only one that no one seemed to have anything negative to report and yet the more expensive models always had a complaint of some kind. When I saw the BP330 was on sale at Best Buy, I ran right over and within an hour of getting home, I'd set up the wireless connection and have been watching NetFlix ...
